Dear Stan:

I am writing to see if you have any use for a bright and energetic young Dartmouth student during the summer months of 1978.

Each year, the Public Affairs Center of Dartmouth College selects ten students to be Public Affairs Interns. This program is designed to encourage students to expand and integrate their classroom education with experience in the work of public agencies or private organizations dealing with public concerns. Interns are selected on the basis of genuine interest in public policy and an ability to function independently as demonstrated in a written application and an interview. In-terms receive stipends to defray living expenses. STAT

[REDACTED] I wrote one of his recommendations for the internship and can provide more information to you, if there is any possibility of a position in the C.I.A.

STAT I told young [REDACTED] that I would write to see if you can use STAT him, but have been slowed up in writing Rhodes recommendations to STAT If you have any use for [REDACTED] next summer, I should be grateful to you. Just let me know what he should do to make arrangements and I shall pass the information on to him and he will initiate whatever procedures you suggest. If you don't have any use for him, I'll understand--I keep reading about you in THE NEW YORK TIMES and figure that you're pretty busy.
